“ It has been almost 3 years since I last heard your voice and it doesn't get easier. I keep thinking that you are going to come back and I will tell you how crazy things have been and I've just been waiting for you to come and hear how it has been. I haven't been the same and I wait for my turn now I guess because you were the best part of my life, and the world is as ugly and selfish as you always said it was except animals are better than the people and football is good in the fall. I miss you Mom, every single day, just waiting for my time, I love you more than anything.
