“ My Aunt Finky always babysat us when we were kids. She always listened and cared for each child individually and wanted us all to know that we were loved. She was so loving. She was more than an Aunt, she was a friend and a mentor. No one could fill the spark that was Finky. She used to let us make huge messes and it never upset her. She had a large bin filled with beans that she'd let us play in. I also remember making paintings with our hands and feet. She was creative. She had as much or more fun than the kids did. She was an amazing cook and spent many hours making healthy options like strawberry salsa or pumpkin chili. Things that were tasty enough that even the kids loved them. At every event she would get involved and do anything she could to help. She was giving. She was also always there for my mother when life got hard. I saw strong women supporting each other. She was a shoulder to cry on and always had the best life advice. She was a mentor. I saw her uplift my mother when they were both struggling. Life was and is not easy. And yet she bore it with unimaginable grace. She always tried to find a bright side or a way to make any situation better. Finky was and is love. ❤️
